Text doubtful:

A.1 The phrase at 1Ch 11.14, יָשַׁע יְהוָה תְשׁוּעָה גְדוֹלָה ‘and the Lord saved a great victory’, corresponds to the wording at 2Sm 23.12, which differs only in the verb (2Sm reads יַעַשׂ ‘and he made’). A metathesis of the two letters, ‘ayin and shin, in the verb has probably occurred in transmission, but it is difficult to say which was the original reading (see Tov 1992:250). The frequency of the verb עָשָׂה, however, with the direct object תְשׁוּעָה suggests the wording of 2Sm 23.12 is the original and that the metathesis at 1Ch 11.14 has been occasioned by the noun calling to mind the (possibly) cognate verb.

A.2 At Is 64.4 the verb should probably be read as נִפְשַׁע.

A.3 MS B at Sir 34.6 reads the niphal הִפָּשׁ, but Bmg corrects this to the hiphil הָפַשׁ, the error in B being explicable by the easy loss of a yodh.

B.1 Although the LXX ἔσοσὲτο (cf. Pesh: zk’ hw’) at 1Sm 14.47 implies the verb [شكر] rather than the MT reading יָשַׁע, there is no sufficient reason for emending.

B.2 Although the NAB (cited by Clines 1989) reads the verb at Jb 5.11, the MT reading of the noun יֵשַׁע can be regarded as correct, if understood as an adverbial accusative (GKC:§ 188 q). See יֵשַׁע Text Doubtful B.3, Syntagmatics A.3.

B.3 The reading at D – 1.008.4 is badly damaged and is doubted (see Renz 1995: 429).

B.4 The three letters יָשַׁע (with the yodh uncertain) appear on a late third-century/early second-century inscription from Mount Gerizim (Naveh & Magen 1997:43, text D). Since the inscription is broken off immediately before these letters, it is not possible to determine whether this is a whole word or part of it. It may be significant to note that the context suggests some form of dedicatory prayer, and the possible appearance of the word יָשַׁע (denoting resurrection?) could indicate that it is a prayer or Psalm to God. This would support the reading יָשַׁע, which, if it is the noun, reflects its appearance in poetry in the OT and most often in prayers and Psalms. The verb also appears most frequently in Psalms and could be an alternative reading here to the noun.

B.5 In 1QH a 11.6 DCH and ThWQ (col. 316) read יָשַׁע, recalling the language of 10.25. But many scholars do not adopt this conjecture (e.g. Dupont-Sommer 1961:207, Lohse) and the Study Edition of the texts (García Martínez and Tigchelaar 1997: 164-65) prints יָשַׁע as a complete word (‘Now’) preceded by a vacat. This ‘occurrence’ is best omitted from consideration.

Qere/Ketiv: none.

1. Root and Comparative Material

A.1 [יְשַׁע] in the OT is attested in the hiphil (184x) and in the niphal (21x). The nouns יָשַׁע and יָשַׁעא are cognate, whilst יָשַׁעא may only be formed by analogy with יָשַׁע, and not actually be cognate (see Root and Comparative Material). According to Sawyer (1990: 443) there are 14 proper names in the Hebrew Bible that are probably cognate, but this number is swollen by several that contain the element יָשַׁע, supposedly a by-form of the root יָשַׁע. They may belong to a separate root altogether (see the sections on Root and Comparative Material for יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁע, and יָשַׁעא). Even if they are not counted, there are certainly six in BH which contain instances of יָשַׁע (two with variant forms) and, in addition to some of these, others are found in Hebrew inscriptions: יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁע, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא, יָשַׁעא.

A.2 The Proto-Semitic root *yt now seems to lie behind Hebrew [יָשַׁע], being attested in proper names in NWSem and most of the ESA languages. The Ug evidence attests to the second consonant being t (Sawyer 1975:78). This new evidence counters some earlier interpretations based on Arb (see B.1). The main arguments outlined by Sawyer (1975) are the evidence of proper names in NW Sem (A.3, A.4, B.3), the collocation of yt terms with deities’ names (as with יָשַׁעא; see A.1, 3, 5, 7-10; also Syntagmatics A.1), chronological evidence (see A.5, 7-10) and phonological equivalence (B.1). Earlier KB (412, along with wasi’a), Huffmon (1965: 215) and Stolz (1971: 786, citing Sawyer 1965:475-76, 485) had supported this view; and at the conference where Sawyer originally presented his paper T.L. Fenton and H.W.F. Saggs had indicated their strong agreement with it (Sawyer 1975: 83-84). Significantly this view was adopted in the latest Hebrew lexicon to incorporate philological data (Ges18: 510 [1995]). Unfortunately the occurrences of yt do not give an independent indication of its meaning.

A.3 The appearance of a root in a name is not evidence for a verbal form ever existing (cf. Sawyer 1975:77), but the existence of this root in non-biblical theophoric proper names may correspond to the use of יָשַׁע in Hebrew personal names and as a verb with primarily God as the subject. The root-morpheme yt is attested relatively frequently in proper names in Amorite. It is the only Sem language from the early second millennium B.C. in which the root appears. The earliest occurrence is the name lašuil in a legal document from c. 2048 B.C. (Buccellati 1966:165). The verbal form derived from this is yašuIL, found also in eight names from Mari (Huffmon 1965:215–16). The root appears to be frequent in Amorite names in comparison with some of the other NWSem evidence.

A.4 The verb appears in the Moabite inscription (line 4) in the expression hš  ny mkl hškn ‘he delivered me from all assaults’ (Segert 1961; Gibson 1971:77–78). The noun might also appear in lines 3–4 – bmt [ylš ‘in the high place of salvation’. For an alternative reading to bmt see Gibson 1971:78.

A.5 The root yt is attested in proper names in Ugaritic. It is found in the names yt’d (Gröndahl 1967:47) and perhaps ygil, if it is a shortened form of yt’îl (Sawyer 1975:78).

A.6 In an Amarna letter the name of a leader in the revolt in southern Palestine is yašuia, a probable example of a name with the verbal root (Knutzvon 1915: II, 319).
A.7 The Aram. name hdys’y (Akk. adad-it-i) in ll. 1, 6 and 12 of the Tell Fekheriya bilingual inscription, probably of the mid-ninth century, can plausibly be associated with the root yt’/hws (see initially Abou-Assaf et al. 1982: 43-44, 80: more recent bibliography in Millard 2000: 154). hws is a loan-word in Aramaic found in the Prayer of Nabonidus (Milik 1956:413) and in the targum (Sokoloff 1990: ad loc.). Aramaized forms of two Biblical root were rare meaning of yy and t was natural to seek an Arabic cognate for it with initial yt’ (Ryckmans 1934–35:I, 232; cf. 112) appear to correspond to the causative element, as in the Hebrew hiphil.

A.8 In Sabaeans personal names with the form hayta’ or hayti’ (Ryckmans 1934–35:I, 232; cf. 112) appear to correspond to the causative element, as in the Hebrew hiphil.

A.9 One name with the root yt’ is recorded in a Nabatean text (Cantaneau 1930–32:I, 105).

A.10 The root yt’ is attested in proper names in Epigraphic South Arabian (Ryckmans 1934–35:II, 10, 75–76), some of them very common. Müller (1963:310; cf. HAL:427) suggested associating [yšš] with ESA ws’ = ‘reichlich geben, reichlich versorgen mit’, but this does not seem to have been widely adopted. Many North Arabian personal names also include the element yt’ (see Müller 1979, who proposed an association of it with a different root yš’ = ‘be high’).

B.1 The connection with Arab wasi’a ‘to be spacious’, which in the causative conveniently corresponds morphologically with the Heb hiphil, is made by many writers (e.g. Driver 1890: 90-91; HAL: 427; Fohrer TDNT: 973; Kraus 1978:139), although BDB (446) did express doubt in 1908. It seems to have first been proposed by Schultens (1761: 7-9; see Sawyer 1968: 20, nn. 1, 2, but Sawyer’s page ref. is incorrect) and was supported by Gesenius (1810: 419 and 1835-58: 639-40, 1380). A proposed Proto-Hamito-Semitic root *ws’ is apparent from Egyptian ‘to be wide’, Berber usa’ and Arabic ws’ ‘to be wide, spacious’, but any semantic connection between this and yšš seems far-fetched. Sawyer notes that to connect this root with [yšš] would involve two exceptional correspondences, now that the latter is seen to be cognate with yt’/yt’: Egyptian s with Sem t and NW Sem ʿ with Arb s (1972:94).

Since [yšš] has Pe Waw forms in both its surviving conjugations, the Hiphil and the Niphal, it was natural to seek an Arabic cognate for it with initial waw and the correspondences ʿ/s and ʿ/ʿ, while not universal in either case, are widely attested. The idea that the underlying meaning of [yšš] could be ‘(make) wide, spacious’ finds support in the fact that there is an antonym in Heb., ʿṣ ʿ, ‘be in/cause distress’, with cognate nouns and an adjective, with another meaning ‘narrowness’, as already noted by Schultens (9), and occasionally occurrences of the two roots are directly related to one another (Jg 10.14; Is 46.7; 63.9; Jr 14.8; 30.7; Ps 34.7; Ne 9.27; 2Ch 20.9). There are difficulties, however, with these arguments. First, now that a possible alternative etymology, from Proto-Semitic *yt’, has come to light, it turns out that the phonological argument is not as decisive as it previously seemed (on the possible problem of the initial y in *yt’ see below on Formal Characteristics A.1). Secondly, there is in fact no actual overlap in meanings between the attested uses of [yšš] and those of wasi’a: [yšš] never means ‘be wide’ or ‘make wide’ (and pace Gesenius 1835-58: 640 yšš in Ps 12.6 need not mean ‘in a wide space’) and wasi’a never has the sense of ‘save, deliver, help’ (Lane 8[supplement]: 3052-53; on such problems in general see Barr 1968: 86-91). Thirdly, while ʿṣ ʿ I is attested meaning both ‘narrowness’ and ‘distress’, it cannot be said to be established that ‘narrowness’ is the basic meaning from which ‘distress’ is derived. In fact ‘narrow’ in the physical sense is a rather rare meaning of the root. Finally, while [yšš] and ʿṣ ʿ do sometimes occur together, this is also true of ʿṣ ʿ and ʿṣ ʿ (1 Sm 26.24; Ps 34.18; 54.9; Jb 5.19), suggesting that the association may well be due to semantic considerations rather than related underlying etymologies (cf. Sawyer 1965: 475 n. 5).
B.2 The possibility that both št' and Ar. wasi'a might go back to a common Proto-Semitic original was apparently envisaged by KB (412), and the North-West Semitic evidence for št' might have developed from a Proto-Semitic *wšt'. But this is unlikely for Epigraphic South Arabian, where an initial waw is normally preserved, and the problem of t = Arb s noted by Sawyer (above, B.1) remains. The apparent use of s to represent šš in the Old Aramaic name ḫdššš'y at Tell Fekheriye (see Root and Etymology A.7) might seem to be a helpful ‘bridge’ between the two, but it is probably due to an orthographical peculiarity that is (so far) unique to this inscription, where it occurs in some other words (Abou-Assaf et al. 1982: 44).

B.3 It has been suggested that the Moabite name Mesha on the Moabite stone (cf. 2Kg 3.4) was probably originally mōša’ (cf. LXX μωσά; Segert 1961:246), but this seems unlikely. The verbal form also appears in the Moabite stone with the god Chemosh as subject. Gibson argues for a double base in proto-Semitic, one with the first consonant y- and one with w- (1971:77).

B.4 Although it is possible that the element išši- in 10 personal names from Mari is related, some argue that it is non-Amorite (see Huffmon 1965:215).

2. Formal Characteristics

A.1 From a synchronic point of view šš appears to be a pe-yodh root (in view of some of its nominal derivatives, šš and תšš). But historically classification either as pe-yodh or as pe-waw is possible, since originally pe-waw verbs are at first sight pe-yodh too, as a result of the early North-West Semitic development of initial waw in most cases into yodh (Moscati 1964: 46). Indeed pe-waw is more obvious for šš when consideration is given to the morphology of the Hiphil and Niphal forms of the verb. Ultimately its classification depends on the etymology which is accepted.

A.2 Although the formation of the Hiphil (and the less common Niphal) is a good first indicator of the original first radical, it is not decisive, especially in a case where no other conjugations are attested. There is at least one case, šš, where a truly pe-yodh verb (cf. the retention of the yodh in the Qal imperfect and the Ar. cognate yabisa) forms its Hiphil as if it were a pe-waw verb (the Niphal does not occur) and the same could be true for šš. Modern grammars deal differently with this anomaly. GK places most such ‘hybrids’ under its heading ‘Verbs originally Pe Waw’ (§69d-f) and only šš, which is treated very briefly, in the section for ‘Verbs properly Pe Yodh’ (§70, cf. paras. a,c). However, BL treats them as pe-yodh with deviant forms in the Hiphil and Niphal (377i, k) and Bergsträsser, who makes the form of the imperfect Qal his primary criterion for distinguishing the two main classes of pe-yodh verbs (weak and strong) apparently agrees (2, §26n). JM (§76d) artificially isolates the case of šš from the other hybrids (the wording here, like most of the treatment of this group of verbs, is that of Jouon), but this is an unsatisfactory approach to the evidence. Whichever approach is preferred, šš with št’ as its older form could be explained in the same way as šš.

A.3 See BL:229f for the form at 1Sm 17.47 and Ps 116.6.

B.1 The form šš is the hiphil participle, although Sawyer notes that it has lost its participial and verbal characteristics, being used as the object of verbs of sending or appointing (1965:477; cf. Syntagmatics A.5).

3. Syntagmatics (examples from narrative books, Isaiah, Psalms and Qumran)

A.1 šš hiphil has human agents as subject: יהושע ‘Moses’ (Ex 2.17), יָמֶּשׁ Shamgar (Jdg 3.31), ישׁשׁ ‘a man’ (1Sm 9.16), יֹּדֶשׁ ‘David’ (1Sm 23.2, 5). יָדַע ‘my lord’ = David (1 Sm 25.31), יָבִיא ‘the hut of David’ (4Q174 1.13), 3p m s denoting נַשְׁר the king’ (Ps 72.4, 13),
The hiphil is followed by vocative 'O Lord' (D-15.008.1), and the verb יָשָׁע ‘to answer’ (Is 46.7).

The hiphil has as direct objects 'Israel' (Ex 14.30; Jdg 3.31; 6.14, 36, 37; 10.1; 13.5; 1Sm 14.23, 39; 1QM 10.4; 11.3; 4Q166 2.14; 4Q174 1.13; 4Q181 1 ii 3), יָשָׁע 'people [sc. Israel]' (1Sm 9.16; 2Sm 3.18; Ps 18.28; 28.9), יָשָׁע 'people [in general]' (2Sm 22.28), יָשָׁע 'Keilah' (1Sm 23.2), יָשָׁע 'inhabitants of Keilah' (1Sm 23.5), יָשָׁע 'David' (2Sm 8.6, 14), יָשָׁע 'his anointed' (Ps 20.7), יָשָׁע 'Ammonites' (2Sm 10.19), יָשָׁע 'son' (Is 49.25), יָשָׁע 'the upright in heart' (Ps 7.11), יָשָׁע 'fugitives' (Ps 17.7), יָשָׁע 'the oppressed in spirit' (Ps 34.19), יָשָׁע 'man and beast' (Ps 36.7), יָשָׁע 'Zion' (Ps 69.36), יָשָׁע 'the afflicted among the people' (Ps 72.4), יָשָׁע 'the lives of the poor' (Ps 72.13), יָשָׁע 'man of the Lord' (Ps 76.4), יָשָׁע 'Joseph' (4Q372 1.16).

The direct object of יָשָׁע hiphil may also be denoted by יָשָׁע + 2p m pl suffix (Dt 20.4; Jdg 7.7; 10.12, 13), יָשָׁע + 3p s suffix (Jdg 6.31), יָשָׁע + 1p s suffix (Jdg 12.2), יָשָׁע + 1p pl suffix (1Sm 11.3); and by 1p s suffix (Ps 3.8, + 18x in Pss; 4Q381 31.2, 2p s suffix (4Q380 1 ii 4), 3p m s suffix (Ps 34.7; 11QT 59.18), 1p pl suffix (Ps 44.8; 106.47), 3p m pl suffix (Ps 37.40; 106.8, 10.21; 107.13, 19; 145.19; 11QT 59.11).

The hiphil participle is the object of the verbs יָשָׁע hiphil 'to raise up' (Jdg 3.9, 15, יָשָׁע 'to give' (2Kg 13.5), יָשָׁע 'to send' (Is 19.20).

The hiphil is followed by the preposition יָשָׁע 'from' + יָשָׁע 'violence' (2Sm 22.3, יָשָׁע 'trouble' (Is 46.7; Ps 34.7; 4Q166 2.14), יָשָׁע 'pursuer' (Ps 7.2), יָשָׁע 'the mouth of the lion' (Ps 22.22), יָשָׁע 'man of blood' (Ps 59.3), יָשָׁע 'distress' (Ps 107.13, 19), יָשָׁע 'the judges of one's life' (Ps 109.31), יָשָׁע + יָשָׁע, יָשָׁע + the nouns יָשָׁע 'Egypt' (Ex 14.30), יָשָׁע 'enemy' (Jdg 2.18; 2Sm 3.18; 11QT 59.11), יָשָׁע 'hater' (Ps 106.10, pl (11QT 59.18), יָשָׁע 'seeker of one's life' (11QT 59.18), יָשָׁע 'Midian' (Jdg 8.22), יָשָׁע 'Philistines' (Jdg 13.5; 1Sm 7.8; 9.16; 2Sm 3.18), יָשָׁע יָשָׁע 'plundering' (Jdg 12.6).

The hiphil is followed by the preposition יָשָׁע + יָשָׁע + the nouns יָשָׁע 'Midian' (Jdg 6.14, 15), יָשָׁע 'enemy' (1Sm 4.3), יָשָׁע 'king' (2Kg 16.7).

The hiphil is followed by the preposition יָשָׁע 'from' + יָשָׁע + pl noun יָשָׁע 'evil' (1Sm 10.19). In Jdg 7.2; 10.14; 1Sm 25.25, 31, 33; Is 59.16; 63.5; 44.4; Ps 98.1; Job 40.14; CD 9.9-10; 1QS 6.27 the attached pron. suffix is reflexive. The appearance of יָשָׁע after the verb is sometimes taken as evidence of an original intransitive sense (Sawyer 1965:481, n. 3; HAL: 428), which may also be indicated by the collocation with certain verbs of saying (cf. A.2).

A.8lish הָּיָה hiphil is followed by the preposition כַּיֵּם ‘by means of’ + יִזְדֹּמ ‘hand’ (Jdg 6.36, 37; 7.7; 2Sm 3.18; 2Kg 14.27; IQM 11.3); or by the preposition בַּיֵּם ‘in’ (2Sm 8.6, 14; Ps 106.21).

A.9lish הָּיָה hiphil is followed by the preposition בַּיֵּם in the expressions יִזְדֹּמ כִּי בָּרִים ‘by great or by little’(1Sm 14.6), יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה ‘by sword and by spear’ (1Sm 17.47), יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה ‘by your loyalty’ (Ps 31.17; pl in 1QH 10.23/25), יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה by your righteousness (Ps 71.2) and יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה יִזְדֹּמ בּוֹשֵׁה ‘by covenant’ (4Q183 1 i 3).

A.10lish הָּיָה hiphil is followed by the prepositions בַּיֵּם ‘for the sake of’ (IQM 11.3-4), בַּיֵּם ‘according to’ (Ps 109.26) and בַּיֵּם ‘for the sake of’ (Ps 6.5; 106.8).

A.11lish הָּיָה hiphil is followed by waw + יִזְדֹּמ (Josh 10.6).

A.12lish הָּיָה hiphil is followed by waw to אָמַר ‘to go’ (Is 35.4), לְיִזְדֹּמ participle (Is 60.16).

A.13lish niphal has as subjects לְיִזְדֹּמ ‘people’ (Dt 33.29), לְיִזְדֹּמ ‘Israel’ (Is 45.17; CD 5.19: implied Ps 80.4, 8, 20; 1QM 10.8 [citing Nu 10.9]), the king (Ps 18.4; 33.16) or the psalmist (Ps 119.117).

A.14lish niphal is followed by יִזְדֹּמ אָּיִם pl ‘enemies’ (Nu 10.9 [and hence IQM 10.8]; 2Sm 22.4=Ps 18.4), and יִזְדֹּמ אָּיִם ‘the Lord’ (Dt 33.29; Is 45.17 [+יִזְדֹּמ] and יִזְדֹּמ יִזְדֹּמ ‘greatness of strength’ (Ps 33.16).

A.15lish niphal is followed by waw to יָּשָׁם ‘to turn’ (Is 45.22), יָּשָׁם ‘to stand’ (Is 47.13: cf. 1QH 10.22-23).

Although the primary translation of ישׁע in the LXX is σῶζω and its compounds (for both the hiphil and the niphal), there are some equivalents that express various other nuances corresponding to some of the translations for the cognate Hebrew nouns. ἀμύνομαι ‘to ward off [danger etc.]’ at Is 59.16 indicates that ישׁע can denote protection from danger and not merely ‘deliverance’. Likewise βοηθέω ‘to help, assist’ and its cognates indicate another connotation of the verb.

The choice of the verb ἐλέεω at Sir 33.1 corresponds to the use of the noun ἐλέος in the LXX for translating the nouns ישׁע (Is 45.8) and יְשׁוּעָה (Sir).

For the active of σῶζω to translate the Niphal at Zc 9.9, see Targum.

B.1 ἀπόλλωμι at Jb 5.15 is probably an attempt to explain a difficult syntax, or arose from a corruption to ἀγωνία ‘to let perish’ (Lust Lexicon:53).

B.2 The MT reading of ישׁע at Is 64.4 has been confirmed by the text of 1QIsa (cf. Pesh, Tg and Vg), although the LXX πλανάομαι ‘to wander, stray’ could imply the reading ישׁע ‘we have erred’ (Westermann 1969:391; Lust Lexicon:378). Some scholars have indeed suggested the emendation ישׁע ‘we have become wicked’ (e.g. Cheyne 1899:73, 171; BHS), although others have followed the MT (e.g. Watts 1987:238).

A.1 The Pesh, as the Tg (see below), has a preference for the verb praq. The rendering šzb, popular with some lexemes in the semantic field, is found only once (Sir 51.3). psʾ appears slightly more frequently, but is still an infrequent equivalent.

A.2 The Aphel npq ‘to bring forth’ (Ps 107.19) denotes some movement in the action of the verb, but this equivalent also appears only once.

A.3 The meaning of bringing assistance is found in the translations zkāʾ (Jdg 7.2) and ʿdar (2Sm 10.11, 19; 1Ch 19.19).

A.4 The translation pārōqāʾ ‘saviour’ is found frequently, for the most part to render the ptc. מושיע.

A.1 There is nothing exceptional in the renderings of the Pesh or Tg, both translating the verb by the same words as they do for many others in the semantic field.
A.2 There is a clear preference in the Tg for the verb פְּרַק. Only once do we find the equivalent בֹּזֵר (Ob 1.21), which is more frequent as a translation for other lexemes in the semantic field.

A.3 At Tg Ho 1.7, the Targumist avoids presenting God as acting as a warrior, and therefore turns the verb into a third person passive (Cathcart & Gordon 1989:30; Smolar & Aberbach 1983:148–49).

A.4 In the Tg to Zc 9.9 MS V, printed in Sperber’s edition, has the Peal active, although MS Z posits a passive participle, corresponding to the Niphal in the MT. LXX, Pesh and Vg all render as active too. Comparison may be made with Ps 33.16 where in the Tg is rendered נָשׁע (Cathcart & Gordon 1989:205).

A.1 Although salvo and libero are the two most frequent renderings for ישׁע, other translations (e.g. adiuvo “to help”) indicate various shades of meaning.

A.2 In Jdg 2.18 the translation is free and rearranged, but et liberabat will be the rendering of המלשׁי (cf. v. 16).

5. Lexical/Semantic Field(s)

A.1 Both in the Bible and at Qumran ישׁע is often found in parallelism or close association with other members of the deliverance’ group: e.g. נצל (Ps 7.2; 4Q171 4.21), stør (Ps 37.40), רציים (Ps 55.17; 11Q10:59.11), גאולא (Is 49.26; Ps 106.10), מלשׁי (Ps 107.19; 4Q183 1 ii 3), and also הדנים (Ps 6.5; 34.7; 60.7=108.7).

A.2 Related words which are not strictly synonyms are also associated with ישׁע, such as שׁפט and דין (Ps 7.11; 54.3; 72.4; 76.10), שׁמר (Ps 12.2; 17.7; 34.19; 86.2; 145.19), ואר (IQM 10.8), and חלץ (Ps 6.5; 34.7; 60.7).

A.3 Other words specify the action denoted by ישׁע in particular cases more precisely, such as שׁלח (Ps 44.4), קבץ (Ps 106.47), מתוך (Ps 107.19), תשי (Ps 119.117), עם (4Q381 31.2) and more surprisingly阆וכ (Ps 44.4; 69.36) and דבכ (Ps 69.36).

A.4 ישׁע Hiphil is found in parallelism with refuge מנוס (2Sm 22.3), and with the verb ענה ‘to answer’ (2Sm 22.42).

B.1 One of the most common words to occur with ישׁע in the Psalms (also in Is 46.7) is ענה, ‘answer’, and synonyms such as שׁמע, ‘hear’ andenton היזח ‘incline the ear’ (Ps 31.3; 71.2; 86.2). These should probably not be regarded as members of the lexical field, as their use is related not to the meaning of ישׁע as such but to the fact that, in the Psalms at least, it is so frequently used (21x) in the imperative form to express a request.

6. Exegesis

A.1 ישׁע appears to denote primarily the bringing of help to someone rather than the actual rescuing or removal of them from danger. Its agent is primarily God or a religious/military leader. The meaning, however, of rescuing or removal from danger may be possible in some prose military contexts.

A.2 In prose ישׁע denotes God’s acts in past history, including God’s saving Israel from Egypt (Ex 14.30). It is also used in the time of the Judges of the protection from foreign nations (e.g. Jdg 2.16, 18). Such military contexts apply the verb both to the acts of God (1Sm 17.47) and to those of military heroes (e.g. Jdg 6.14–15; 1Sm 9.16).

A.3 ישׁע is found in forensic contexts, but this need not be the original meaning (see B.1 below). Although it is primarily found with the noun מושִׁיעַ (e.g. Dt 28.29, 31) it may be implied with this sense in the appeal of the women of Tekoa to David to help her in her case (2Sm 14.4) (Hubbard 1997:557) and in some Psalms. The implication is that the King can dispense justice in the same manner that God does in the Psalms. The examples are few and the argumentation is tentative. In each of these instances one could argue that the verb ישׁע means merely ‘to save’ and that the context indicates the saving will be forensic. Certainly when an appeal to a king is made it denotes acquittal, but this is probably a developed sense from the general meaning.

A.4 The idiom ישׁע hiphil + יָד + לְ is used in the context of bloodguilt (1Sm 25.26) and refers to taking revenge. It denotes specifically exercising justice oneself (with the implication that someone else has done or should do it). In Jdg 7.2 God warns the Israelites that they might boast of executing the victory on their own part rather than giving credit to God (cf. Jb 40.14). As already noted (Syntagmatics A.7) ישׁע hiph is quite frequently followed by לְ. instead of the more common direct object. This does not generally seem to be because the texts concerned are late (GK §117n), though the substitution of י for ל in 1Ch 18.6 (cf. 2Sm 8.6) could be explained in this way. More likely the variation is related to the use of י with Hiphils of some intransitive verbs, where it has been suggested that the expression is ‘properly (as it seems) a dat. commodi’ (BDB, p. 511). Alternatively (or additionally), one might associate it with the exceptional frequency of nouns cognate with ישוע (such as ישוע and ישועה), which is a distinctive feature of ישוע among the words for ‘deliverance’: the verb may in these cases have been thought of as a kind of denominative equivalent to ‘bring ישוע/ישועה to a person or group (see further 7. Conclusion). A special group is constituted by instances where the subject of the verb is י (or a similar word like יש or יesh) with a pronominal suffix and the ‘beneficiary’ is denoted by י with the same suffix. The meaning is thus reflexive: someone’s own ‘hand’ brings him the success or victory denoted by ישוע hiph. A sequence of examples occurs in 1Sm 25.26, 31 (where many commentators insert י before יש or with LXX) and 33, in the dialogue between Abigail and David about how David is to respond to Nabal’s insults (vv. 10-11). The fact that in all three places the phrase is associated with incurring bloodguilt could be taken as evidence, in isolation, that it means specifically a judicial misdeed (so Sawyer, TDOT 6, pp. 454, 457). But this is improbable in the light of the full range of occurrences of this idiom, especially those in which it is applied to God in a wholly positive sense (Is 59.16; 63.5 and probably Ps 98.1). The data were assembled already by Driver (Samuel2, pp. 200-02), who concluded that י (and its synonyms) referred to the use of one’s own power (‘force’) to achieve one’s aims. When God does this, it redounds to his glory. But human beings must, in a widespread biblical view, rely on God to help them, for they cannot succeed on their own. Using one’s own human power is therefore viewed negatively (so also in Jdg 7.2; Ps 44.4 and Jb 40.14). Two clear occurrences of the idiom at Qumran fit well into this picture. CD 9.9-10 (the duplicate 4Q267 i 4-5 preserves a few letters of the context) cites 1Sm 25.26 freely as the basis for not using force to make someone swear an oath; 1QS 6.27 uses the phrase of aggressive, arrogant behaviour towards a more senior member of the community (cf. 6.10-11). In neither case does it have a specifically legal character. The same idiom may also have been present in 4Q380 1 ii 4 and 4Q417 22.2.

A.5 Appeals to one’s ally on the basis of a treaty imply that ישוע may in these instances have a meaning of providing assistance (e.g. Josh 10.6; 2Sm 10.11-12).

A.6 In Wisdom literature the verb only appears twice in Proverbs and four times in Job. In Proverbs it denotes the assistance provided by God (Pr 20.22) against one’s enemy (cf. A.5) and the prolonged state of well-being given to those who follow the way of God (Pr 28.18). In Job it is three times used of saving the weak (Jb 5.15; 22.29; 26.2) and once used of winning victory (Jb 40.14).

A.7 The verb is most frequent in Isaiah of all the Prophets. In the Prophets the verb often denotes in oracles of salvation God’s future deliverance from the Exile (e.g.Is 49.25; Jr 30.7; cf. acts of history in A.2). It often seems to be a call for help when in danger (Is 37.20) or for healing from sickness (e.g. of Hezekiah at Is 38.20).

A.8 ישוע appears most frequently in the book of Psalms (57x) in addition to 13 psalm-like passages elsewhere in the OT (for the latter see Sawyer, TDOT, 6, p. 459). The occurrences in the Psalms relate to all the varied kinds of situation that have already been mentioned: deliverance in past history (Ps 44.4 [cf. vv. 2-3]; 98.1; 106.8, 10, 21; 107.13, 19), war (18.4, 28, 42; 20.7, 10; 33.16; 44.7-8; 60.7=108.7; 76.10 [cf. vv. 6-7]; 80.4, 8, 20), legal disputes (7.2, 11; 69.2; 71.3 [cf. v. 13]; 109.26, 31), future deliverance of Zion/Israel (69.36; 106.47), the support of the needy (17.7; 34.19; 72.4, 13; 76.10), the righteous and devout (7.11; 37.40; 86.2, 16; 145.19) and the king (18.4; 20.7, 10), as well as intervention in times of a breakdown in society (12.2; 36.7), protection in undefined circumstances against personal ‘enemies’ (3.8; 22.22; 28.9; 31.3, 17; 54.3; 57.4; 86.2, 16) and sickness (107.19; perhaps 6.5).
Here especially the generality of the word is very evident. Most often it presupposes a situation of distress, but it is accompanied by יִשָּׁע in only about one-fifth of its occurrences and the military uses do not all arise out of the danger of defeat (note 118.28, with the parallel יִחְשַׁוֶּל, ‘succeed’). יִשָּׁע hiph overlaps with יִמְשָׁע in the breadth of its usage (and they are associated in 109.26 [cf. Josh 10.6; Is 63.5; Job 26.2]), but they are complementary rather than synonymous: יִמְשָׁע is more focused on the relational aspect of the action, while its effect and result is more prominent in יִשָּׁע hiph, whether it refers to deliverance or the bestowal of success and victory. The subject in the great majority of cases is God and his wonderful, mighty power is sometimes explicitly mentioned (98.1; 106.21). But so is his חֵדָס, ‘loyalty’, in associated prepositional phrases (6.5; 31.17; 109.26: cf. 57.4), as are related words like יִירָע, ‘righteousness’ (71.2), and שֵׁם, ‘name’ (54.3; 106.8). The most distinctive feature of the use of יִשָּׁע hiph here is the high frequency of the imperative, often in its emphatic form, in the appeals to God which are so characteristic of the numerous laments in the Psalter (3.8; 6.5: over twenty times in all).

A.9 In expressing God’s action to his people by יִשָּׁע Niphal the Lord is described as ‘shield of your help’ (Dt 33.29), which is interesting considering the use of the noun יִשָּׁע with such expressions.

A.10 At Qumran יִשָּׁע appears three times in the War Scroll, reflecting perhaps the biblical usage in military contexts (A.2), and four times in the Temple Scroll, mainly in historical references. These also appear elsewhere (CD 5.19; 4Q372 1.16; 4Q385a 18 ii 10; 4Q389 1 ii 3). The reuse of the idiom discussed in A.4 suggests its continued use in everyday speech, but יִשָּׁע hiph is not a prominent expression of contemporary prayer or liturgy: there is only one secure occurrence in 1QHa and three more in other texts (4Q380 1 ii 4; 4Q381 31.2; 4Q511 10.9). The contrast with the biblical psalms could not be greater, and perhaps reflects its infrequency in LBH and as a loan-word in Aramaic other than Samaritan Aramaic (Sawyer 1975:80). But the seven occurrences preserved in the Heb. of Sirach (if 13.6 is included) give a rather different impression, especially when compared with the rarity of יִשָּׁע hiph in the biblical wisdom literature.

B.1 Whilst יִשָּׁע can be found in forensic contexts in the Hebrew Bible (see A.3 above), its origin as a forensic term, later developing from this technical to a non-technical sense, as advocated by Sawyer (1972:94-95; 1975:80), is uncertain. Scepticism regarding this origin was first expressed in 1970 by participants at the conference where Sawyer presented his findings (recorded in Sawyer 1975:83–84), and Sawyer himself admits that the question must remain open until a wider range of contexts is available (1975:80). The main pieces of evidence marshalled by him are:

a) its use in forensic situations in the Bible (see A.3 above);

b) a forensic origin explains the use of יִישִׁיט (e.g. at Dt 22.27), if it means originally ‘counsel for the defence’ (see Sawyer 1965; B.2);

c) the verb’s parallelism with other words that may denote legal terms (see Lexical/Semantic Field(s) A.2);

d) the appearance of legal terms in proper names in Semitic languages.

The last of these is the weakest. For a) the evidence can be interpreted in either direction. It may have had a non-technical sense and developed its use to include the technical sense, especially since the cases of parallelism (c) are not conclusive. Likewise, (b) the meaning of יִישִׁיט, as well as not denoting exclusively a ‘counsel for the defence’ in synchronic Hebrew, could have derived from the technical sense of the verb after the latter had itself developed from the non-technical sense.

B.2 In his study of יִישִׁיט Sawyer is careful not to read too much into one word (1965:486), but expresses conviction that the evidence points to his interpretation. He sees the form מושיע (which he takes to be a noun; see Formal Characteristics B.1) as denoting a specific legal office of ‘advocate’ or ‘witness for the defence’, for which there is no other word in Hebrew but there would have been a need for one.

7. Conclusion

A.1 It now appears that the root may not be related to the Arabic ‘to be spacious’, and that little semantic evidence can be gained from tracing the verbal root. The frequency of the root in personal names may suggest that it is a verb used of God, but that much may already be derived from the Hebrew evidence.

A.2 מושיע denotes the bringing of assistance to someone in need, whether in military, civil or judicial contexts. It may also denote the actual saving of someone in battle or in history in general. From this a meaning of being in a prosperous state appears to have developed (especially in Wisdom literature).

A.3 On a few occasions מושיע might denote the provision of defence from enemies.

A.4 In its breadth of application מושיע is particularly close to עזר among the words for deliverance and as a result the translation ‘help’ has sometimes been preferred (compare Exegesis A.8). But מושיע also remains close to other words in the group such as הציל, as the (moderate) frequency of its use with מז attests, hence the continuing popularity of the rendering ‘save’ (and compare the Versions). The following account may clarify the synchronic relationship, whether or not its possible diachronic implications (for which there is no proof) are valid. In the Exegesis section of the entry for עזר (A.3) it is suggested that its use in the majority of its biblical occurrences (especially in the Psalms) for ‘help’ where deliverance was involved led to its occasional association with מז like other members of the group. With מושיע there seems to be an extension in the opposite direction. One might envisage a continuum of human experience extending from distress at one pole to equilibrium at the centre and to victory and success at the other pole. מושיע like other members of the ‘deliverance’ group mainly represents a movement from the negative pole to equilibrium, but it was natural for it also to be applied to the movement in the same ‘direction’ from equilibrium to the positive pole of success and victory. As such it came to occupy the original domain of עזר, ‘help’, as well.

A.5 It has also been suggested above (Exegesis A.8) that, while עזר refers to the action done in its relational aspect, מושיע refers to its effect or result.

B.1 Although Sawyer has argued that the origin of מושיע lies in forensic contexts, the evidence is inconclusive. It is perhaps better to consider the synchronic evidence more than the diachronic.
